Humanitarian

Recognizing employees for acts of kindness and charity who contribute to enhancing and promoting the welfare of humanity in the community, nation, or world.

January 2017

Each quarter we recognize an individual with the humanitarian award. The humanitarian category of Heart and Soul recognizes employees for acts of kindness and charity who contribute to enhancing and promoting the welfare of humanity in the community, nation or world. This is Tracey Suppa-Todd from human resources. Tracey is a role model who shares her values by leading a troop of Girl Scouts. Her troop has honored patients and staff who served in the military by making and delivering poppies made of paper, along with copies of the poem “In Flanders Fields” for the Veterans. The person who nominated Tracey said her unit looks forward to the gifts each year because the gifts bring smiles to patients’ faces. Tracey’s Cadettes have also created pillow cases with inspiring messages for patients at Women and Children’s Hospital and taken flowers to nurses there during Nurses Week. They’ve also helped entertain children of new medical residents during the residents’ welcome reception. Tracey is helping her girls build loyal relationships, develop future leaders and instill great community awareness with these and other service projects her troop undertakes. Tracey, it’s my pleasure to present you with this quarter’s humanitarian award.
Each quarter we recognize an individual with the humanitarian award. The humanitarian category of Heart and Soul recognizes employees for acts of kindness and charity who contribute to enhancing and promoting the welfare of humanity in the community, nation or world. Dr. Christine Teague has been the project director of the CAMC Ryan White HIV Program since 2001. Many clients know her as the pharmacy specialist who treats them as a whole person -from prescribing medications to fit their personal needs and lifestyle, to helping them overcome personal barriers in order to stay in care. But Christine’s dedication goes above and beyond doing her job – it is a calling that has benefited our community and beyond. • She is a current board member of West Virginia Health Right. • She tirelessly volunteers as an advocate for the L-G-B-T community, women’s health and reproductive rights, church ministry and AIDS victims’ commemoration activities. • She even planted 200 bulbs in one day for Charleston’s Living AIDS Memorial Garden. Christine, thank you for putting your health and soul into sustaining and growing this program as well as for being an advocate and educator for our clients.
Each quarter we recognize an individual with the humanitarian award. The humanitarian category of Heart and Soul recognizes employees for acts of kindness and charity who contribute to enhancing and promoting the welfare of humanity in the community, nation or world. This group of people is being recognized with the second quarter humanitarian award for really stepping up and helping one of our own employees. The employee and his family had been evicted from their home. The employee was also taking care of two small children (who are not his) and his grandmother. The employee also reported that he had taken a shower in the rain. These folks and others collected enough money to get the family a room at the local Motel 6 for three nights. They also raised about $100 in spending money for food and other necessary items. Thank each of you for what you did to help one of our own.
Each quarter we recognize an individual with the humanitarian award. The humanitarian category of Heart and Soul recognizes employees for acts of kindness and charity who contribute to enhancing and promoting the welfare of humanity in the community, nation or world. Denise Burgess volunteers with our Crisis Intervention Team. The Summersville Regional Medical Center ED lost a member of their team, while on duty and reached out to CAMC. Denise, willingly, and on her own time, went to Summersville on the evening of the funeral of the team member to counsel and provide a debriefing for the hospital staff. The manager at the Summersville ED said Denise’s selfless and generous actions to provide the debriefing allowed them an opportunity to grieve, heal and grow during such a great tragedy. Denise has also provided similar support for our own departments. Thank you for putting your heart and Soul into helping people during times of great emotional need.